TO BOMBARD RIO AGAIN

TWO CENTS.

The Revolting Squadron Preparing for an Attack.

News From Minister Thompson-Diplomats Here Believe the Government Will Be Overthrown.

Rio is in danger of another bombardment by the revolutionary fleet, according to a dispatch received by Secretary Gresham from Minister Thompson. The dispatch is dated yesterday at Petropolis, four miles from the Needles, the western extremity below Rio, and reads as follows:

"Have been advised that merchant vessels have been ordered far up the bay by revolting squadron, apparently to bombard reports that on the date of mailing three men-of-war were in the harbor, the Brazilian flagship Trajano, the Portuguese gunboat Mendallo and H. M. S. Beagle.

The Navy Department is undecided about the cruiser Detroit, now in Hampton Roads awaiting her final trial, and she may be ordered to Nicaragua instead of to Rio. Her exact duty will be outlined after the completion of the trial.

The Brazilian Revolt.

Owing to the telegraphic embargo established at Rio de Janeiro several weeks agonly the most meager details have so far reached here as to the causes leading up to the existing serious revolution in Brazil. The specific act on the part of President Pekvoto which has brought about the present situation is said to have been his veto of an act passed by congress prohibiting a vice president. Such a statute would manifestly be aimed at Pelvoto, and even if his veto of it was constitutional, as his representatives in Europe have publicly declared, the passage of the act by congress indicates hostility to him. On the other hand, it is asserted by the Brazilian legation in London that congress voted to declare martial law in the capital, thus supporting the president in an essential point, and siding with him against the mavy.

The hurried steps taken by the Navy Department to concentrate warships in Brazilian waters show a full appreciation of the gravity of the situation. While the navy as a service, has a special grievance against Pelvoto, the vacuum of the parament to encentrate warships in Brazilian waters show a full appreciation of the gravity of the situation. While the navy as a service, has a special grievance against Pelvoto, the cause of the revolt being political, not professional.

The Protection of Foreign Interests. Mr. Peffer also offered a resolution, which lation is necessary to prevent the interruption of inter-state railway traffic by lawless and unauthorized persons, and to punish persons guilty of robbery and murder committed on inter-state railway trains.

The resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Manderson (Neb.) as to the abolition or consolidation of land offices was taken up and Mr. Manderson said that his ground of complaint was that, in the state of Nebraska, four land offices had been abolished without consultation with any member of Congress from that state.

Mr. Mills (Texas) expressed his surprise that any Senator should claim that an executive officer was bound to consult a member of Congress as to any administrative remarks would apply more to the repeal bill than to the resolution. He agreed with him that the House and Senate should be The Protection of Foreign Interests.

There is no subject that calls for everlasting discussion, except that concerning the world to come, and that had better be taken by faith than by argument."

In his remarks he happened to use the word shrink, and then he hastened to add quickly, "No, I shrink from nothing in the line of duty."

"I ask those who are opposed to the bill," he continued, "to give me their response, so that we can see if there is not some point in the domain of conference and compromise upon which we can agree as to the
